ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

The Queensland Water Directorate (qldwater) is delivering a targeted Wastewater Quality and Trade Waste Workshop, bringing together approximately 60 professionals from utilities, local and state government, and industry across Queensland to address the growing challenge of managing known and emerging contaminants.

For wastewater treatment and cleanup technology providers, this event presents a valuable opportunity to connect directly with the practitioners responsible for identifying, assessing, and managing contaminant risks at the trade waste interface: where source control and treatment solutions intersect.

Building on insights from the 2024 Emerging Contaminants Workshop and qldwater's Trade Waste Uplift Project, the program will explore the role of trade waste as a critical intervention point, highlight sector challenges, and showcase practical, Queensland-based case studies.

Sponsorship positions your organisation at the forefront of solution delivery, demonstrating how your technologies can support utilities to manage contaminants more effectively, meet evolving regulatory expectations, and reduce downstream impacts on treatment systems, biosolids, and receiving environments.
